

I would like to pursue graduate studies at Cambridge University so that I can build up a career as a teacher training cross-cultural communicators in UK.

On the strength of my scores, I gained acceptance in 1995 into British Columbia University and got a diploma of English Foreign Affairs Translation in 1997. During my 1 year's excellent working in a company after graduation, exercising diligence to give full play to my intelligence, I passed the tough exams in May, 1998 for continuing study as an undergraduate majoring in English education at the same school. I wanted to be the kind of teacher who made learning exciting, who understood her students and their lives, and who created innovative learning environments. Here, I received strict training not only in English but also in teaching English education, hardworking and devoted.

Giving substance to the university's emphasis on practical skills, I have gained a lot of hands-on experience. Since early in 1998, I have been serving as a valued teacher on a part-time basis at Looney Middle School, the key school in XX City. Besides, I have taught English in a 6-month internship program at XX Middle School. In this innovative internship program, I also helped students cope with their problems in daily lives, thereby gaining a more intimate understanding of the student's mental and emotional development. In the two schools, I have applied the teaching methods I learned at the university but also strengthened my dedication to the profession of teaching. What makes teaching so enjoyable to me is that it is a learning experience.

After a years' part-time experience teaching, what impressed me most for the job was teaching technology. I found that my creativity in teaching increased by multi-media teaching as a new power to me and in turn to my students. I had found a combination of skills that affected my students in such a positive way that I knew I had to share my findings. Not long before my graduation, I know it was time to broaden my horizons in the field of education to participate in the multi-media teaching program as my graduation thesis at SCNU. My research was presented to juniors at SCNU and highly praised by the teachers and students.

In July, 2000, I have not been willing to quit my teaching job if my brother didn't want me to help his business as a saleswoman. However, the working experiences in the company which made me close to the society and benefits to me a lot as a future teacher who has enlarged the scope of knowledge in other field. I'm supposed the comprehensive quality is very important as a teacher who is not only master the knowledge of his major.

In truth, I believe that an Education master degree will allow me to explore all aspects of the educational field, and provide myself with an excellent basis for a career in teaching. I hope that my statement shows I am a dedicated student, as well as an active member of the community.

To conclude, I would like to thank you for taking the time to consider my application, and it is my utmost desire that we will be able to work together in the not to distant future.
