FARM LIFE

Farms are places where food is grown and animals are raised. Farmers work hard to take care of their crops and animals. Some farms grow fruits and vegetables, while others raise animals like cows, chickens, and sheep.

On a vegetable farm, you might find rows of carrots, tomatoes, and lettuce. Farmers water their crops and keep the weeds away to help the plants grow strong. On an animal farm, farmers feed their animals and make sure they have shelter. Chickens live in coops, cows stay in barns, and sheep graze in fields. These animals provide food like milk, eggs, and meat for people to eat. Farms are important because they give us food to eat every day!
